AFTER

The goal of this Roswell master bathroom renovation was to create a spa-like environment reminiscent of the tranquility in Atlanta's Serenbe community. The owners wanted a luxurious, peaceful bathroom that focused on using sustainable products. In addition to the serene ambiance, the owners specifically asked for a significantly larger shower and toilet space, a surround sound stereo system, heated tile floors (the bathroom is over the garage and gets very cold), considerably more storage space, a low tub with a ledge that provided ease for entering and exiting, and redesigned closets.

To accomplish the owners' dream bathroom, contractors took advantage of unused cavities in the walls. Now, the shower is three times the size of the original one, as is the water closet. Added luxuries, such as the towel warmer, built-in cabinet linen hamper, task lighting, a shoe closet and custom-made art, have made the bathroom a one-of-a-kind retreat for the owners.

To create a custom bathing space, a combination of glass and stone was used in the shower and tub in shades of blue, gray and cream. Because the tub is situated directly beneath a window, sunlight reflects on these tiles, creating a glistening and inviting space. Now, the owners have their own spa-like retreat that they can visit anytime—without an appointment. ▶
